Situation

Located on a hillside in the grounds of the Lanteglos Country House Hotel, set within fifteen acres of beautiful gardens and woodlands - the name derives from the Parish Church of St. Julietta, which sits prominently within the valley (Old Cornish: 'Nant Eglos', meaning 'Church Valley'). Located a short distance away, Bowood Park Golf Club, winner of 'Golf Monthly Magazines Gold Course Award' for the western region, which offers a 72 par course set over 230 acres of rolling hills and woodland, a ten bay covered driving range, large putting green and a chipping green. The ancient town of Camelford is located approximately 1.5 miles away, straddling the A39 Atlantic Highway and the River Camel - from which it gets its name. Historically, the town was part of an old medieval trading route and became an important centre of commerce - now the popular town offers a range of shopping and leisure facilities, schools for all ages, public houses and churches of various denominations. Lanteglos also makes for an ideal base of which to explore the dramatic north Cornish coastline with the popular coastal villages Padstow, Polzeath, Port Isaac and Rock being approximately: Padstow - 17.5 miles Polzeath - 11 miles Port Isaac - 8 miles Rock - 11.5 miles
