Location

Woodbury is a large historic village in East Devon, known for its strong community character, rural charm, and proximity to both countryside and coast. Having Saxon origins, the village is mentioned in the Domesday Book with properties including traditional thatched cottages and stone houses. There is a well defined village centre with a church, local shops, pubs, and primary school plus a strong sense of community, with clubs, events, and local traditions. Popular with commuters who work in Exeter (About 6 Miles) but prefer village living, Woodbury is adjacent to Woodbury Common, part of the East Devon Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty (AONB) and close to the coastal towns of Exmouth and Budleigh Salterton.
